

2ND PLACE

The Polluted Ocean

It was a starry night with a bright moon, and the water was foggy at the ocean. There was a little girl, and she was looking from her window down at the foggy water. She kept looking out her window, and then she decided to get some fresh air. As the little girl walked outside of the house, she felt a cold but nice breeze. She finally got to the edge of the water. Then she sat down in the sand, not long after the water started to whisper, but at first she just thought it was the wind. Soon the whisper turned into talking, and the ocean started to say that all of its friends are slowly disappearing due to pollution.

The ocean started to talk about how he needed someone's help to help his friends because soon he would be all alone. The little girl just sits there in shock because this wasn't something that was a regular thing. Then the little girl asked, 'Why me, out of all people?' The ocean started to say that it was because no one was listening to me. The little girl said 'I will do everything that I can.' The ocean thanked her, and she walked back to her house. The next morning, she almost forgot all about it, but as she was getting ready for the day, she suddenly remembered that night. She started to brainstorm about how she could help.

Her idea was that she was gonna start an ocean cleanup. A lot of people signed up. Later that night, she was sitting at the beach and then the ocean started to talk again, thanking her and then disappeared. She walked away feeling good about herself.